ARTHUR G. STREET

Mr. Arthur G. Street, dairy farmer, near Salisbury, in Wiltshire, England; author of "Farmer's Glory" and a dozen other books on farm topics; lecturer and writer, and the most interesting authority in English Agriculture, is coming to Canada to address a series of meetings.

Mr. Street is being brought to the country through arrangements made by the Packer's, Massay-Harris and Imperial Oil because of the keen interest entertained for his farming books by Mr. J. S. McLean, Mr. T. A. Rushton and Mr. G. W. Anderson.

The plan for these meetings were made by the Honorable Duncan Marshall who has read some ten books from the pen of Arthur G. Street, Mr. Marshall visited the author at his home in Wiltshire and was impressed with the desirability of having a few public meetings in Canada by an English Farmer who is so practical and so charming in address.

Mr. Street spent four years as a farm labourer on a Manitoba homestead about 60 miles northwest of Portage la Prairie, coming to Canada when he was about 18 years of age and graduating into a first-class farmer. He was able to hold his job with one farmer for four consecutive years.

He returned to England at the time of the war and, at its conclusion, took over his father's farm, and since then has been here the past 18 years at Spetchley Farm in Wiltshire, which now operates as a dairy farm, milking 70 cows upon the Hosier system, which means milking them outside in pens. These cows are not shorn either winter or summer and Mr. Street is conducting a very successful dairy farm.

The visit of Mr. Street to Canada will be one of the agricultural events of the year 1937, and farmers, their wives, sons and daughters should not miss the opportunity of seeing, hearing and, if possible, this practical English farmer.

Mr. Street will also visit a half dozen Agricultural Colleges in the United States where he will deliver addresses before his return to England.

Mr. Street will be one of the principal speakers at the Lethbridge Experimental Station Field Day June 17th.

He became an author by chance after writing a few articles for newspapers upon farm topics, and finally being asked by one of his friends to set down in book form some of his notes on agriculture. This book was produced, under the title of "Farmer's Glory", the most favored review story ever published in Britain. It went into seven successive editions within 14 months after publication. His fame has spread almost all over the world as a writer of farming stories.

Other books which have come from the pen of Arthur G. Street are "Sowing the Rain", "Hedge-Trainings", "The Endless Furrow", "Country Days", "Thinking Aloud", "A Country Calendar", "Moorsong", "Lambsong", and "The Gentleman of the Party".

He is a regular contributor to the "Farmer's Weekly" in Great Britain and his page of "Randolph Philosophy" is read by thousands of people in the farms in the United Kingdom.

In these days when we are developing a successful trade in farm products between Canada and Great Britain, the people who are interested in Agriculture and Farming, will be happy to have the privilege of hearing one of the most fascinating speakers in Great Britain discuss a variety of farm topics.

Mr. Street is a practical farmer, living and operating the farm upon which he was born, and has that keen knowledge of everything that contributes to successful farming which makes his addresses doubly interesting.

The Provincial Departments of Agriculture in each of these Provinces and the Federal Department are awaiting the results of our meetings this morning. Dr. B. H. Deputy, Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, and Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director of the Dominion Experimental Farms, will be present and will be discussing the arrangements for his visit.

Mr. Street has been broadcasting now for a number of years for the British Agricultural Corporation, and a good number of the talk shows over the radio have been made from farms.

This modest and unassuming man of the land has been in the public eye perhaps more than any other British farmer in the last four or five years since he became famous through the production of his first book "Farmer's Glory."

Among the topics upon which Mr. Street will talk will be the natural life of England. "The part which farming must play in any worth while Empire scheme of co-ordination." The varying nature of English farming with a detailed description of the various types of farms, and some famous farms in England. "A wood picture of the rural scenes of England and the people who inhabit it." He has a most interesting story also on the English fox which has trans formed a Wiltshire farmer into a writer and broadcaster with some humorous stories of the many tricks which he has dropped in the strange land.

The visit of Mr. Street to Canada will be one of the agricultural events of the year 1937, and farmers, their wives, sons and daughters should not miss the opportunity of seeing, hearing and, if possible, this practical English farmer.

Mr. Street will also visit a half dozen Agricultural Colleges in the United States where he will deliver addresses before his return to England.

Mr. Street will be one of the principal speakers at the Lethbridge Experimental Station Field Day June 17th.

Dominion Day, July 1st, will be celebrated in Vulcan this year under the auspices of the Elks' Lodge. A baseball tournament will feature the day, with teams from Champion, Vulcan, Arrowwood and possibly Loon.

The farm home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller is presenting a beautiful picture this week, a bed of tulips containing over 100 blooms, being out in a blaze of glory. The mass of color backed by lilac bushes in full bloom, honeysuckles and other flowering shrubs is indeed a picture well worth seeing. Mr. Miller has been noted for his flower beds in the past and this year it seems as though he is exceeding his record of former years. Many a town in town is graced by their glory and many a sick bed is cheered by the radiant beauty of flowers from the Miller home.

Considerable damage resulted to fields from Wednesday's wind storm, and rain and warm weather is needed to repair damage done.

Grasshoppers and cutworms are also causing their share of grief. Early sown crops are showing good growth, while later sown crops remain somewhat patchy. Warm quiet weather will improve conditions immensely.

After I had been knocking around Martin Kelly's a few days, he sent me down to the little town of O'Leary to James O'Leary's farm on the next line. Mrs. O'Leary was as plump as a sack of grain; and the jolly, good-natured woman gave me a piece of bread with a thick spread of sugar. Her fair face puckered and cracked in a smile like a potato bush in roasting.

It was the very day after I was there that a tree fell on Mr. O'Leary and killed him. The next day, while his sons had been back shopping in the bush. In falling a maple the tree lodged on the limb of a large elm. The boys left it suspended thus, and went on to chop a tree standing on the hill behind. The sound of their next fall was so great that it shook the maple free; and it fell crushing their father to death.

Of course, there was a wake at the O'Leary's. The neighbors were invited to meet and sit up the fall of night. I slipped over to the house of the dead to see the doings.

"Gand e th' hawn! Post (how are ye, Faddy?)" the widow asked me kindly as I went into the house.

"Sí, I am well, thank ye (all right thank ye)," I replied, doffing my caubeen.

Then I went to the body. I went before the body. My heart beat like a little bird in your hand with fear. Jimmie would jump out at me; but I lot on to be saying my prayers.

The high-pipe coffin lay lashed on a bed in the corner of the ground floor of the cabin. It was a sad and mournful meeting. With faces drawn out, and solemn looking as owls, the men stood silent, the walls uttering pious sighs and be-things.

The women mourners sat on benches, and every few moments one of them would run her fingers through her hair and shriek out "Oh! poor O'Leary!"

Poor Jimmie had to say "Good-bye" and fro as the wall gradually died down. At the end of it she would fold her shawl again across her breast. Betimes of the walling, the men would stop, and again, after glancing now and again toward the body, in low guttural tones, made complimentary comments on the life, ancestry and character of the deceased.

On entering the room of the dead, the men would mutter before the bier to say a prayer for Jimmie's soul; and then a drop of drink was taken.

There was tobacco, snuff and whiskey in plenty. Pipes passed from hand to hand, and the flickering light of the candle was hanging in the room like the mist over a plowed field in the plow season.

A queer little old woman came in, at bent double; and she sat and knelt before the bier, and she writhed a drop of poison, then was given the honor of a chair. Someone thrust a freshly-filled pipe into the ashed and passed it to her.

"Gand e th' hawn! Post and the souls of all the dead," she sighed; and seated in comfort at her ease, she withdrew like a hermit in the privacy of her shawl.

The woman was short and dark like a cold winter's day, and she needed a long, dark night to make her good-looking. Mary Doyle went about the countryside taking care of sick folk and minding babies. She got a trifling sum of money, because she was a special at keening. Devil a pinch of sorrow had she in her heart for the dead man in his going. The face of her was enough to sour a cook of cream.

The kitchen, where a mutton had laid his last feet to the linstock as long as the Irish tongue; and it is only a diversion that makes an end to the number of its verses. Its general purpose is to excite pity, compassion, or hate; and to my mind it is especially effective when used to curse and blast the cruel and treacherous English, who both the keen and the wake itself are entirely, entirely, pagan. And why Mother Church let such rites get mixed up with the burial of her Christian dead is beyond me. The Irish keening speaks out in terms of death, and yet it has a deep and hopeless melancholy as its basis; and finds no place for the joy of the blessed resurrection. In a low tone Mary Doyle began the funeral song:

Cold and silent is his bed!
Cold and silent is his bier!
Damp is the dew of night,
The sun brings warmth
And dries the dew,
But his heart will stay cold.
Macree!

Cold and silent is his repose! He is gone forever.
He is gone forever.
Cold and silent is his grave!
Och home, Macree!

The keener had finished, and rocked her body back and forth as the dirge stretched itself out in weird and melancholy repetition. One after another the other women joined in a chorus; and their long drawn-out soliloquies were plied with shrieks that the night air, between whiles, a pipe passed along the benches from woman to woman. The creatures were enjoying themselves immensely.

The keening died down as a fresh group of neighbors arrived and attended to their religious duties. Among them was my boy, Martin Kelly, who had enjoyed a lift getting over the hill in his dad's old car. The son and Martin's boy began the same parish in the old sod. Yet for years back they had never met but the din of their noise destroyed the quiet place, and the parson, who stuck his head out at one another. Only recently there had been a bitter riot between them touching the price of the O'Leary heifer.

Martin rose from his knees with platters, and the food ready at the moment that gladdened the hearts of the mourners into merry talk and stirred up cheerful music as the singers bolder the cracklings and the crackles, and sucked sweet bacon out of the bone of the roast.

After gorging ourselves, we wiped our hands on an old towel that was passed around; and to comfort themselves, the men had another drink and then had a good nap out in the stable and forty winks.

In the heel of the evening there came from the direction of the whiskey barrel and its dipper the thumbing and snarling of a hobbie. A hobbie is a small, squat, squat, or two strings of a hobbie as battered looking as himself. His lead body was swayed by his wobbling; but the stand he had made was the master of the house. Dickens a man or lass in the cabin but began shovelling away with heel and toe! It was Jimmie's daughter Molly that led the sport. What a hub-bub and a rumpus! The men had to hold the corners out of the coffin to keep them dancing a four-hand reel.

"Oh o o o o! Poor Jimmie! Jimmie's dead as death is Jimmie's head!"

There was old-cart wheel tracks in every man's brain, and his thoughts like a madman's, and his tongue like a madman's.

As Martin turned suddenly from the bier to take the old fire sparkled in his eyes, and, with a look of fear, he exclaimed:

"Eh! cold as death is Jimmie's head!"

There was old man and a cradle; but the stand he had made was the master of the house. Dickens a man or lass in the cabin but began shovelling away with heel and toe!

"Oh o o o o! Poor Jimmie! Jimmie's dead as death is Jimmie's head!"

There was old man and a cradle; but the stand he had made was the master of the house. Dickens a man or lass in the cabin but began shovelling away with heel and toe!

It was Jimmie's daughter Molly that led the sport. What a hub-bub and a rumpus! The men had to hold the corners out of the coffin to keep them dancing a four-hand reel.

BRING BACK
THOSE DOLLARS

Champion or Carmangay as business centres for their districts can at least make a bid for a larger percent of the trade from their immediate districts. A considerable amount of this business is going to outside sources. It should be retrieved as much as possible in order to maintain the service and quality of merchandise in the immediate shopping centres.

Every dollar spent by our citizens on goods from outside sources is a dollar lost. It reduces our prosperity not alone to the amount of its intrinsic value, but to the extent it would have turned over in the community.

The value of a dollar to a community lies not so much in its ability to purchase a dollar's worth of good as in its fluidity, its turnover, the number of times it is made to purchase a dollar's worth of goods.

Thus, when a dollar turns over quickly and changes hands infrequently, we have prosperity.

Now, for the sake of your own prosperity and your own economic well-being, do your buying in your district.

Newspaper Advertising Called Indispensable

Newspaper advertising, because of its great spread, is the most indispensable medium. William Austin, an account executive for the General Outdoor Advertising Company, told members of the Advertising Funeral Directors' convention at Chicago

"Retailers tell us they have to have newspapers to move their goods," Mr. Austin said. "People may not buy magazines and radios, but the newspaper is part of everyone's daily life and therefore is indispensable as an advertising medium."

Save The Birds

The wholesale slaughter of certain species of birds is deplorable, when one considers the important part they play in the control of insect pests. Naturalists will doubtless in statistics tell us that one family of nutatches, during the breeding season, consumed 21,000 insects and larvae, besides an enormous number of insect eggs. It has been estimated that a fledgling, in the first month of its life, will eat twelve times its own weight of insects. This becomes more significant when we learn that a young caterpillar, in the same space of time, will devour 40,000 times its own weight of food. Were there no birds, insects would quickly gain the upper hand, despite all man's efforts to control them with nicotine sulphate and lead arsenate.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Champion's baseball nine chalked up their sixth straight win of the season when they defeated the Nobleford team 19-4 on the local diamond Tuesday evening. In the six games played Champion has scored 63 runs, with only nine runs scored against them.

With the veteran Praderast on the mound, Nobleford was unable to hold the Champion batsmen, although had the pitcher been equal any report the result might have been different. Dick Latiff, third baseman for Champion was the star of the game bringing in seven runs. He contributed two homers, one with the bases loaded, a triple and a double. Roy Robinson played a good game on second and following his demonstration of pitching on Sunday, when he pitched a no hit game against Blackie, the fans feel that he is doing his share in keeping Champion on top. Walker on the mound for Champion came through with a good game, allowing only a few scattered hits.

Batteries—Champion, Walker, Watt, Nobleford, Prendergast, Rubin, Medd.

scored on D. Latiff's double, Hargraves hit placing two on bases. Walker then faced out a home run bringing the score up to 4-0. In the second inning Robinson knocked a home run. The ball played was ragged throughout with several errors marked down for Blackie. The game was called for rain in the seventh inning. Blackie—000 101 0-2. Champion—110 004 1-10. Batteries, Blackie, Baker and Malemburg, Champion, Robinson and Watts.

There are more than 200 types of taxes in North America imposed on oil industry.

Several of them are collected on every operation on the business from setting up equipment in the oil fields at the first station to every barrel of oil produced from crude oil as it comes out of the ground to highly refined gasoline, fuel oil and lubricants, is taxed.

Producers of crude oil and natural gas, refiners, petrochemicals, oil and natural gas produced, oil withdrawn from storage, sales of oil and gas wells, as well as severance taxes, royalties, production taxes, anti-pollution taxes, well drilling permit fees, and derick taxes.

Refiners pay taxes on refined products. Pipe line companies pay property taxes on their pipe lines, ad valorem taxes on the crude they transport, and a big variety of other levies.

Marketing companies and service stations pay taxes on the different products they sell.

It is a series of tax levies that perhaps no other industry can show, in the total a huge burden, paid by the industry and users of its products. Art. 21.

Owing to lack of space, the W. L. minutes were held over until next week.
